

We hope your calendar is marked for November 14-15, to enjoy a weekend full of insightful discussions between young and forward-looking individuals. Join us at the first-ever think tank hosted by Germany's second-largest Model United Nations conference, IsarMUN.

IsarMUN is an annual conference held in a physical format in Munich, Germany, where students from all over the world speak about political challenges that threaten the livelihood of nations today. We are excited to announce that we have had the chance to come up with an entirely new format this year that will allow us to broaden our participation range and offer exciting new activities, in form of a think tank. Throughout this weekend, participants will partake in one of 7 committees (EU-China Summit, Committee of Science and Technology, UNHCR, UNFCCC, WHO, NATO, and World Bank) where current issues such as improving access to education for refugees, answer the question of what role governments play in fostering innovation, and many more will be tackled.

For each of these sessions an expert will be welcomed, who is working on/researching about the overarching agenda of the committee, to give a keynote presentation and join participants in a Q&A session as a bonus. We are hoping that this endeavor will help to form realistic policies during debate.

The deadline for delegation sign-up is slowly approaching, please let us know before October 31st if you are interested in embarking on this journey with us, by signing up under the following link. If you have any other questions, please refer to the Secretariat, reachable at secretariat@isarmun.org.

We hope to see you all soon!
